The Treasure of Lemon Brown

1. (iv) Greg will probably fail math
2. (ii) was a famous blues singer
3. (iv) steal the treasure
4. Lemon Brown's role in the story is to teach Greg the value of family. Greg realizes that his father cares about him after his conversation with Lemon Brown. Lemon Brown tells Greg about his son Jesse and what their relationship meant to him. "If you know your pappy did something" shows Greg that he should be happy that his father cares about him.
5. Explaining Cause and Effect
Greg helped protect Lemon Brown against the thugs, so now Lemon Brown realizes that Greg has not come to steal his treasure, and that he can trust him. Fighting the thugs together is the cause, Lemon Brown trusting Greg, "you okay for a youngster", is the effect.

A Summer's Reading

6. (iii) doesn't have a high school education
7. Because George wants Mr. Cattanzara to respect him.
8. (ii) gives him money every week
9. (ii) he thinks people respect him

10. Inferring/Predicting/Explaining patterns

Yes, I think that George will read the books, because he realizes after his second conversation with Mr. Cattanzara, that he must change his life if he wants people to respect him. I can infer that sitting down to read 100 books is the start of George's new life.

No, I don't think that George will read the books. In the story we see how George always blames others for his problems. He won't go to night school because the teachers won't respect him. He won't go to summer school because the other students would be too young. Whenever George has a chance to improve his education he finds a reason against it. So, I believe that he will continue this pattern of behavior.

11. Thank You Ma'm

The quote tells us that we need to perform acts of kindness, because even small ones can have a big influence.

Roger learns from Mrs. Jones that there is kindness in the world. Even though he tried to steal from her, she took him to her house, fed him and gave him money to buy blue suede shoes.

The connection is that that Mrs. Jones' simple acts of kindness towards Roger can have a big influence on his life.

12. The Road Not Taken

Frost usually began his poems with a description of nature, which he then connected to a real life situation.

The poem speaks about a person standing in a forest who tries to decide which road to take. He stands there for a long time ("long I stood"). We can see that the poem is a metaphor for real life. The speaker in the poem isn't really in a forest, but in a dilemma between two decisions in life.

That is exactly how Frost wanted us to understand the poem. Not literally but as an allegory for a real life situation.
